

Figuring out your testimony and how to share it can sometimes be tricky, but it's not as difficult as you may think at first. Think of it like telling a story. Like every good story, it should have a beginning, middle, and end with the middle being the high point or climax. The beginning should focus on your life before Christ and how you came to recognize your need for Christ. The high point of your story should emphasize how you heard the gospel and your response to it. The conclusion should focus on the difference that Christ has made in your life. Here are some questions to ask yourself and reflect on as you go about writing your story:

Your Life Before Christ

1. What are three words you would use to describe your life before Christ?

2. What caused you to see the need for Christ in your life?

How You Heard and Responded to the Gospel

3. Where did you hear the gospel when you came to faith? How was it presented to you? Why was it impactful?

4. Had you heard the gospel previously? If you did, what made it make sense this time? What was different about it this time?

5. How did the gospel speak to an area of need in your life?

Since Coming to Faith in Christ

6. What has changed since coming to Christ? How would your previous descriptions of your life change?

7. Where and how have you experienced God's grace in your life (Ephesians 2:8–10)?
