

Neighborhood Reflections Exercise

Take some time this week as a group and on your own to answer the following questions. Pull out some colored pencils, draw some pictures or symbols - this is an exercise for you to reflect on the places you are currently present.

1. Do you know where God has you? Write down the places where you work, play, and live below. (If it helps jog your memory, think about the places you regularly were in the last two weeks.)
2. Do you know the people God has in your life in these places? List people's names under each place from above to observe your presence in those places.
3. Do you know if you are present in these people's lives? Specifically identify if you are accessible, available and/or vulnerable with these people listed.

Look at your lists/drawings. what do you observe? Are there patterns you notice?
Do some places or people have more access, availability, or vulnerability from you?
What will you do this week based on what you are learning from this exercise?
